EXECUTIVE ORDERS.

As it is desirable that uniform usage in regard to geographic nomenclature and orthography obtain throughout the Executive Departments of the Government, and particularly upon the maps and charts issued by the various departments and bureaus, I hereby constitute a Board on Geographic Names and designate the following persons, who have heretofore cooperated for a similar purpose under the authority of the several departments, bureaus, and institutions with which they are connected, as members of said Board:

Prof. Thomas C. Mendenhall, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, chairman.

Andrew H. Allen, Department of State.

Capt. Henry L. Howison, Light-House Board, Treasury Department.

Capt. Thomas Turtle, Engineer Corps, War Department.

Lieut. Richardson Clover, Hydrographic Office, Navy Department.

Pierson H. Bristow, Post Office Department.

Otis T. Mason, Smithsonian Institution.

Herbert G. Ogden, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Henry Gannett, United States Geological Survey.

Marcus Baker, United States Geological Survey.

To this Board shall be referred all unsettled questions concerning geographic names which arise in the departments, and the decisions of the Board are to be accepted by these departments as the standard authority in such matters.

Department officers are instructed to afford such assistance as may be proper to carry on the work of this Board.

The members of this Board shall serve without additional compensation, and its organization shall entail no expense on the Government.

Benj. Harrison.

Executive Mansion,
September 4, 1890.

It is hereby ordered that there be added to the duties of the United States Board on Geographic Names, created by Executive order, dated September 4, 1890, the duty of determining changing, and fixing place names within the United States and insular possessions, and it is hereby directed that all names hereafter suggested for any place by any officer or employee of the Government shall be referred to said Board for its consideration and approval before publication.

In these matters, as in all cases of disputed nomenclature, the decisions of the Board are to be accepted by the departments of Government as the standard authority.

The White House,
January 23, 1906.

The official title of the United States Board on Geographic Names is changed to United States Geographic Board.

In addition to its present duties, advisory powers are hereby granted to this Board concerning the preparation of maps compiled, or to be compiled, in the various bureaus and offices of the Government, with a special view to the avoidance of unnecessary duplications of work; and for the unification and improvement of the scales of maps, of the symbols and conventions used upon them, and of the methods of representing relief. Hereafter, all such projects as are of importance shall be submitted to this Board for advice before being undertaken.

The White House,
August 10, 1906.

So much of the Executive order of August 10, 1906, as grants additional advisory powers to the United States Geographic Board is hereby rescinded and these additional powers are transferred to the Board of Surveys and Maps.—Executive Order of December 30, 1919.

FIFTH REPORT

OF THE

UNITED STATES GEOGRAPHIC BOARD.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE BOARD.

The United States Board on Geographic Names was created by an Executive order issued by President Harrison September 4, 1890. Prior to that date there was an unofficial organization, composed of 10 persons, all employed in the public service, all engaged in geographic work, and all keenly sensitive to the confusion and contradictions in geographic names as used in Government publications.

Originally the Board was composed of 10 members. Its present membership is 14. The membership, past and present, together with departments, bureaus, offices, and institutions represented, is set forth in the following table:

ORIGIN OF AND CHANGES IN GEOGRAPHIC NAMES.

With the exception of the names of political subdivisions, geographic names in this country have not, as a rule, been bestowed by any formal authority. The names of natural features—rivers, lakes, mountains, capes, etc.—and of unchartered bodies of population have received their names originally from explorers, surveyors, and early settlers, and these names have been perpetuated by common consent. The names of states, counties, and municipalities of all classes, on the other hand, have been applied either by legislative enactment or charter, and therefore possess some degree of formal authority.

Differences of usage exist to a large extent not only in the names of natural features and unincorporated places but even in those of organized bodies of population whose names have been bestowed by formal authority. These differences have originated in numerous ways.

In the unsettled parts of the country different exploring expeditions, ignoring the work of their predecessors, have given new names to features already named. As elsewhere noted this difficulty has often occurred in Alaska, which has been visited in recent years by numerous expeditions.

The transliteration of Indian names has everywhere been a fruitful source of differences in spelling, inasmuch as no two persons understand alike or render into the same English characters the obscure sounds of Indian names.

It often happens in the case of the larger geographic features, such as extended mountain ranges, rivers, etc., that different names have been applied locally in various parts and these names have become well settled in usage.

It frequently happens that railroads adopt names for their stations different from those of the towns or villages in which they are situated and thus divide usage. To a much greater extent, however, than the railroads has the Post Office Department confused the nomenclature of the smaller towns and villages by attaching names to the post offices not in accordance with those in local usage. Indeed, an examination shows that there are in this country thousands of cases where the name of the post office does not conform to the local name of the place in which it is situated. These differences are very confusing to those using the postal service, and it seems desirable to reduce their number so far as practicable, at the same time recognizing the necessity of having no post office name duplicated in a state.

By far the greater number of differences in usage, however, have their origin in carelessness or ignorance on the part of those making use of the names. Such errors appearing in print are frequently perpetuated, especially in popular works, and often supplant the original name in usage.

Originating in these diversities of spelling there is distinctly traceable a development of geographic nomenclature which is, on the whole, proceeding in a beneficial direction. Its tendency is toward the discarding of objectionable names and the adoption of pleasing ones and toward the simplification and abbreviation of names, particularly as shown in the dropping of silent letters. The Board, recognizing this course of development, deems it to be within its power to guide it and even to forestall it, so far as its future course may be foreseen.

The extent to which geographic names have been modified without being radically changed is scarcely appreciated. A large proportion, probably a majority, of the names of natural features have undergone alterations in spelling to a greater or less extent since they were first applied, while of the names of political divisions, although established by formal act, a considerable proportion have also changed, and such variations have, in thousands of cases, become firmly established. Therefore, the position assumed by some persons, that we should revert to the original forms of names, would, if carried out, result in changing the names of a large proportion of our natural and artificial features.

POLICY OF THE BOARD.

The Board is agreed that in general the name which is in common local use at present should be adopted. This is a broad, general principle, and summarizes the policy of the Board, with the exception of certain classes of names. It covers cases of changes or corruptions of names, except where they are considered to be unworthy of perpetuation.

The Board clearly recognizes that the importance and value of its decisions depend upon their general adoption. To change corrupted forms back to pure forms, after the corrupted form has been established, is to make a decision which will not be followed. Such decisions are not merely useless; they are positively harmful. They tend not to settle but to unsettle usage. To restore such names as Port Townsend to Port Townshend, Pysht to Pysche, Ozan to Aux anes, Low Freight to L'eau frais, Sitka to Shitka, Possum to Opossum, is not always possible, however desirable. The aim, therefore, of the Board is to discover and support by its decisions the forms in use in all cases, except those where specific and positive objections thereto are found to exist. That it should always succeed in this aim is obviously impossible. Changes are constantly occurring. The Board can not if it would, and would not if it could, oppose change.

The difficulties encountered in carrying out this principle are found mainly in determining what is the established usage, or the prevailing local practice where it is divided between different forms. Where it is so divided, opportunity is afforded for the selection of the more appropriate and euphonious of the names in use.
The Board considers it desirable to depart from local usage in certain cases in order to effect reforms in nomenclature. Among these departures approved by the Board are the following:

(a) The avoidance, so far as seems practicable, of the possessive form of names.
(b) The dropping of the final "h" in the termination of "burgh."
(c) The abbreviation of "borough" to "boro."
(d) The spelling of the word "center" as here given.
(e) The discontinuance of the use of the hyphens in connecting parts of names.
(f) The omission, wherever practicable, of the letters "C. H." (courthouse) after the names of county seats.
(g) The simplification of names consisting of more than one word by their combination into one word.
(h) The avoidance of the use of diacritic characters.
(i) The dropping of the words "city" and "town" as parts of names.

All of these changes are warranted by the direction of development. The possessive form of name is rapidly disappearing, except in rare cases where good reason exists for its retention. In most cases this is effected by dropping the apostrophe and the final "s." In certain cases, however, usage or euphony appears to require the retention of the final "s," when the apostrophe only is dropped.

Concerning the termination "burg" or "burgh," as Harrisburg, an extensive correspondence has developed the fact that in more than three-fourths of the places having this termination the final "h" is not in local use. The case of the termination "boro" or "borough" is very similar; the present tendency is strongly toward the substitution of the abbreviated form, and the Board, therefore, deems it advisable to induce uniformity in this matter in the manner indicated.

In the case of the word "center" as part of a name, as Mansfield Center, Center Rutland, usage appears to be about equally divided between "center" and "centre," and the Board has adopted the first of the above forms of the word.

Hyphens in connecting parts of names appear to be useless, while they add to the complexity of the spelling.

The practice of adding the letters "C. H.,” meaning courthouse, to the name of a county seat is prevalent, especially in the Southern States. Frequently the place has two names, one being its charter name, the other the name of the county with "C. H." appended; thus the county seat of Raleigh County, W. Va., is known as Beckley and as Raleigh C. H.
The tendency toward simplification is in no way shown more decidedly than in the combination of the several words forming a name. Thus "La Fayette" has become well-nigh universally "Lafayette," and "El Dorado" has become "Eldorado." The Board approves this tendency and will further it so far as possible without forestalling usage too greatly.

The use of diacritic characters in geographic names in the United States, such as the German umlaut and the Spanish tilde, is rapidly disappearing. It would be impossible, even were it desirable, to oppose this change.

The practice of adding the word "city" or "town," as Boise City, as a part of the name is a useless complication, growing in most cases out of an optimistic spirit on the part of the promotors of the place. It is often misleading and almost invariably unnecessary.

There are in Alaska a good many names of Russian origin ending in off, which terminating syllable has been variously rendered off, off, ow, and ov. The Board uniformly uses off. Examples: Baranof, Chichagof, Popof, and Shelikof.

Outside of the United States, where the Department of State and United States Hydrographic Office are chiefly interested, the work of the Board is directed to the harmonization of American usage in geographic nomenclature with the usage of the great map-making nations—England, Germany, and France. The Department of State, by reason of its diplomatic and consular functions, is intimately concerned with the present style, change of names, transfers of territorial jurisdiction, cession and acquisition of territory by various governments abroad, and the proper forms of the titular political nomenclature of foreign states and nations. The interest of the Hydrographic Office is involved by reason of its publication of charts and sailing directions of all foreign waters, to the effective use of which uniformity of geographic nomenclature is obviously indispensable. The forms of foreign names recommended for adoption are determined on consultation of established usage, the best authorities upon ethnological and political history and derivation, and current geographic and political information from authentic sources.

Many names in foreign civilized countries present a peculiar difficulty and appear to require that a further exception be made to the general principle of following local usage. This lies in the fact that many foreign names have been anglicized, and the anglicized form, often quite different from the local form (meaning by local form that in use by the best authorities in the country having jurisdiction), is well established in usage in this country.

Such cases wherein English-speaking nations use names differing from those locally accepted are not numerous, but they are among those most in use and represent the most prominent features of the earth; for instance, we call Deutschland Germany, España Spain, Livorno Leghorn. In many cases we translate the foreign name, if it is capable of translation, into English words. Other countries, in turn, treat the names of this country in a similar manner. Indeed, most non-English-speaking people translate the name of this country into their own tongue, forgetting that geographic names, like personal names, should not be translated.

It is unquestionably desirable and proper that local usage should be followed in these cases as well as in others, i.e., that the home names should be the ones universally used; but in most of these cases it is obviously impracticable to introduce this reform, at least at present. The people of the United States can not be induced to change from Germany to Deutschland, or even from Italy to Italia, or The Hague to 's Gravenhage. It is a reform, however, to which we may look forward and work toward and which may be attained in the future.

It is understood by the Board that our charts of the coasts of foreign countries using Roman characters, made for the use of our Navy and merchant marine, generally require the use of the local forms of these names, while on the other hand popular usage in this country, especially in our atlases and textbooks, requires the anglicized form. The Board practically leaves this matter on the same footing as heretofore, approving the use of local spelling of foreign names upon our charts and the anglicized forms upon maps designed for use in this country. It hopes, however, that the way may be open in the near future to the adoption throughout of the local and the rejection of the anglicized forms. In such specific cases as have been brought to its attention it has decided uniformly in favor of the local forms.

Most of the nations of Europe, either through national boards or geographic societies, are engaged in the regulation of the orthography of geographic names. Their attention has been particularly directed toward producing uniformity in the transliteration of aboriginal names written in characters other than Roman. These nations have practically agreed upon a system of transliteration, which, with one or two exceptions, has been adopted by this Board, thus coming into practical agreement in this matter with the rest of the civilized world.

PRINCIPLES.

Under the Executive order of January 23, 1906, the United States Geographic Board was given jurisdiction over the establishment of 14842—21—2 new geographic names, and as a guide in the selection of names the Board adopted and issued a circular of "Principles," as follows:

Euphonious and suitable names of Indian, Spanish, or French origin should be retained.

Names suggested by peculiarities of the topographic features designated—such as their form, vegetation, or animal life—are generally acceptable, but duplication of names, especially within one state, should be avoided. The names "Elk," "Beaver," "Cottonwood," and "Bald" are altogether too numerous.

Names of living persons should be applied very rarely, and only those of great eminence should be thus honored. No personal names should be attached because of relationship, friendship, or personal interest, nor should names of obscure persons be given. Names of eminent men now dead may be thus perpetuated, particularly those of early explorers, naturalists, geologists, topographers, etc.

Long and clumsily constructed names and names composed of two or more words should be avoided. It is a foregone conclusion that such names will not be adopted by the public. If the name selected consists of more than one word the words should be combined if practicable.

The multiplication of names for different parts of the same feature, such as a river or mountain range, should be avoided. Only one name should be applied to a stream or mountain range throughout its entire length; in the case of a river the name should follow up its longest branch.

The naming of forks, prongs, branches, etc., as "East Fork" or "North Prong" of a river, should be avoided unless there is a special reason for it. In most cases, independent names should be given to a river's branches.

That spelling and pronunciation which is sanctioned by local usage should, in general, be adopted.

Where names have been changed or corrupted, and such changes or corruptions have become established by local usage, it is not usually advisable to attempt to restore the original form.

In cases where what was evidently originally the same word appears with various spellings sanctioned by local usage, when applied to various features, these various spellings should be regarded as in effect different names, and, as a rule, it is inadvisable to attempt to produce uniformity.

Where a choice is offered between two or more names for the same place or locality, all sanctioned by local usage, that which is most appropriate and euphonious should be adopted.
The possessive form should be avoided whenever it can be done without destroying the euphony of the name or changing its descriptive application.

In names ending in "burgh" the final "h" should be dropped.
Names ending in "borough" should be abbreviated to "boro."
The word "center," as part of a name, should be spelled as above and not "centre."

The use of hyphens in connecting parts of names should be discontinued.
The letters "C. H." (courthouse) appended to the names of county seats should be omitted.

In the case of names consisting of more than one word it is sometimes desirable to combine them into one word.

It is desirable to avoid the use of diacritic characters.
It is desirable to avoid the use of the words city and town as parts of names.

It must be understood that these are not designed as rules, but as guiding principles, from which the Board reserves liberty to depart whenever, in its judgment, it deems it advisable to do so.

PRINCIPLES FOR SPECIAL APPLICATION IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

(1) Geographic names in countries that use Roman characters should be rendered in the form adopted by the country having jurisdiction, except where there are English equivalents already fixed by usage. In cases where the English equivalent is so different from the local form that the identity of the latter with the former might not be recognized, the English form should be adopted, but, both forms may be given.

(2) The spelling of geographic names that require transliteration into Roman characters should represent the principal sounds of the word as pronounced in the native tongue, in accordance with the sounds of the letters in the following system.

An approximation only to the true sound is aimed at in this system. The vowels are to be pronounced as in Italian and on the Continent of Europe generally, and the consonants as in English:

a has the sound of a in father. Examples: Java, Banana, Somali, Bari.
e has the sound of e in men. Examples: Tel el Kebir, Medina, Peru.
i has the sound of i in ravine, or the sound of ee in beet. Examples: Fiji, Hindi.

o has the sound of o in mote. Examples: Umnak, Unga.

ai has the sound of i in ice. Example: Shanghai.

ei has the sound of the two Italian vowels, but is frequently slurred over, when it is scarcely distinguishable from ey in the English they. Examples: Beirut, Beilul.
c is always soft, and has nearly the sound of s; hard c is given by k. Example: Celebes.

ch is always soft, as in church. Example: Chingchin.

f as in English; ph should not be used for this sound. Thus, not Haiphong, but Haifong.

g is always hard (soft g is given by j). Example: Galapagos.

h is always pronounced when inserted.

j as in English; dj should never be used for this sound. Examples: Japan, Jinchuen.

k as in English. It should always be used for the hard c. Thus, not Corea, but Korea.

kh has the sound of the oriental guttural. Example: Khan.

gh is another guttural, as in the Turkish: Dagh, Ghazi.

ng has two slightly different sounds, as in finger, singer.

q should never be employed; qu is given by kw. Example: Kwangtung.

b, d, l, m, n, p, r, s, t, v, w, x, and z, as in English.

y is always a consonant, as in yard, and should not be used for the vowel i. Thus, not Mikindany, but Mikindani.

All vowels are shortened in sound by doubling the following consonant. Examples: Yarra, Tanna, Jidda, Bonni.

Doubling a vowel is only necessary where there is a distinct repetition of the single sound. Example: Nuulua.

Accents should not, generally, be used; but where there is a very decided emphatic syllable or stress which affects the sound of the word it should be marked by an acute accent. Examples: Tongatábu, Galápagos, Paláwan, Saráwak.

In order to secure uniformity in so far as possible in the matter of transliteration of Chinese place names and in order that the system adopted may conform to what is apparently to be the standard in American publications, it is recommended that the following rules be adopted for observance, viz:

(1) The spelling generally shall follow the list of Chinese post offices and Provinces as given in the Imperial Postal Guide, published for the use of the Postal Service by the Inspector General of Customs and Posts.

(2) Names shall be printed as single words.

(3) Forms sanctioned by long usage in standard publications in the English language shall be retained.

HOW DECISIONS ARE MADE.

Cases brought to the Board for decision are at once referred to the executive committee for examination and report. This committee examines each case, consulting printed authorities, such as mother maps, gazetteers, local histories, atlases, etc. Especially does it seek after, and it generally obtains, the local usage, to which it attaches great importance. Local usage is usually obtained by correspondence with county clerks, postmasters, and residents who are conversant with local conditions. This information derived from correspondence is often supplemented by the oral testimony of individuals having personal knowledge of the name under consideration. The information needful for deciding may be obtained quickly, within a day or two, or it may take months. When the executive committee is satisfied, it tabulates the results on cards, which are printed blanks whereon spaces are left for entering various items of information. When all the data are tabulated the members of the committee record their preferences, signing their initials. Thus there is a record vote of the executive committee. The cards so prepared are submitted to the Board at its regular monthly meetings, and considered one by one. Usually the executive committee agrees on its recommendations. Not infrequently, however, there is a divided report. The case being submitted to the Board, a vote is taken, and a majority, not of those present, but of the whole Board, is necessary to decide. The decision so reached is written at the top of the card, which is thereupon stamped Approved, with the date of the approval. Usually from one to several cases at each meeting are sent back by the Board to the committee for additional investigation. A facsimile of one of these cards is printed herewith:

Such is the present practice of the Board, gradually developed as the outcome of experience. The principles which govern decisions were at the outset considered and formulated with great painstaking and care. They were the subjects of many and earnest discussions, and it is a matter on which the Board congratulates itself that these principles so elaborated and adopted have so well stood the test of usage. While experience has improved practice in the Board's operations, it has contributed practically nothing in the way of principles.

WHAT THE BOARD HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

It has made upwards of 25,000 decisions, including the acceptance of new names and the settlement of disputed cases.

Among these decisions are a number which involve the definition of limits and application of names, especially those of the greater features of the country, such as Cordilleras, Rocky Mountains, Sierra Nevada, Blue Ridge, etc. These involved much study and correspondence.

After months of discussion and study, a set of conventional signs and abbreviations for use on maps was agreed upon, thus making Government usage absolutely uniform in this regard.
REPORT OF SUBCOMMITTEE OF UNITED STATES GEOGRAPHIC BOARD ON A SYSTEM FOR TRANSLITERATING RUSSIAN ALPHABETIC CHARACTERS IN THE SPELLING OF PLACE NAMES.

(March 10, 1919.)

In a study of systems of transliterating into Latin letters the 36 characters of the Russian alphabet, it is evident that to transcribe them with only 26 Latin characters available will require one or the other, or both, of two methods, viz, to use diacritical marks, or to produce the extraneous characters by the employment of digraphs.

It has been learned from the Government Printing Office that, so far as concerns the printing of the words, no difficulty will be incurred in the production of diacritics. On the other hand, the use of diacritics is attended by these adverse features: When spread upon maps, especially navigation charts, the marks may easily be confused with hatching or contour lines or the conventional representations of sand or rocks or trees, etc.; in discursive writing, stopping to construct an unfamiliar mark causes delay, the fruitful source of error compelling exceptional care, whereas a digraph flows easily from the pen; the typewriting machines in ordinary use do not carry diacritical marks which, therefore, would have to be added by pen. Finally, in its Fourth Report, 1916, page 15, the Geographic Board included in its announced departures from local usage "The avoidance of the use of diacritic characters."

The pronunciation of Russian names appears to be of less vital interest now than formerly; with the great increase of telegraph and post offices and the growth of commerce throughout the world, and the consequent expansion of written communication, more attention is being paid to the official spelling of place names and less to the representation of pronunciation. Involved with that question, however, is that of transliteration. The essential object of the present study is what may be termed a merely graphical representation of each Russian letter such that a transliterated name may be unerringly restored to its original form when needed, as for verification or other purpose; and, while the corresponding sounds have an important function in the construction of a table of equivalents, they should not be permitted to hinder such construction when there is difficulty in harmonizing the vocal and the written expressions. Illustration of the situation may be found in other languages; as a well known instance, Racławice, the scene of Kosciusko's victory, is pronounced "Ratslavitse" (c having the sound of ts), yet no attempt is made, on public monuments in the United States or elsewhere, to transcribe the name into that form, probably because of the confusion that would then attend any attempt at restoration to the original. A more familiar instance, perhaps, is that of the Italian city Civita Vecchia, universally and properly pronounced "Chivita Vecchia." To attempt to combine a graphical transcription of characters with complete rules and renderings for conveying the many shades of Russian pronunciation, including occasional and accidental sounds, would result in a system so elaborate and so complex as to defeat the simple object of a transliteration table and to enter the domain of a grammar.

If every Russian letter be represented by a letter, or combination of letters, in English, then any name can be transliterated correctly from English back to the original Russian form; otherwise it can not. Manifestly, the finished system should be as complete as possible from all points of view, and pronunciation and retransliteration both require that all the elements of the Russian alphabet shall be reproduced in the proposed table of equivalents, although some have already been dropped by Russian reformers. This is successfully done by means of diacritical marks in the transliteration table which is used for index cards in the Library of Congress and adopted by the American Library Association.

The following works have been consulted in this study of the subject:

How to learn Russian, Riola; Grammar of the Russian Language, Morfill; Hugo's Russian Grammar; Bondar's Simplified Russian Method; Golovinsky's Russian and English Dictionary; various contributions to the Geographical Journal, New Englander and Yale Review, and other periodicals; various charts.

Accompanying this report is also a tabular statement, compiled in the Hydrographic Office, in January, 1919, of equivalents used, or recommended, by various authorities, supplemented by statements subsequently received from the Departments of State and of War and the War Trade Board, and a communication from the Russian embassy in Washington. Among these there are differences in a limited number of entries. Where there is actual unanimity, or a very preponderating consensus of authorities of major consideration, in favor of a transcription, no attempt has been made to collate the reasonings leading to such transcription or to do more than simply adopt it; for the others the attempt is made to quote and apply rules previously made by the board or to formulate such additional rules as may be needed to harmonize the different practices with least violence to any.

Among the rules that have been adopted by the Geographic Board the following are applicable in this discussion and are followed unless otherwise noted:

The use of diacritical characters will be avoided.

a has the sound of a in father.
ch is always soft as in church.
e has the sound of e in men.
g is always hard as in Galapagos.
i has the sound of i in ravine.
j is pronounced as in Japan; dj should never be used for this sound.
u has the sound of oo in boot.
y is always used as a consonant, as in yard, and should not be used for the vowel i.

The first care of the committee has been to produce a table of equivalents under a rigid rule to exclude diacritics. The actual working of the resulting system has then been tested by applying it to a number of Russian place names and noting the practical expediency of adopting it or any objections that may seem to make it inexpedient. Finally, another table has been worked out with the single limitation of not using diacritical marks to distinguish any Russian letter that can be as well distinguished by the use of diagraphs without the reproach of inexpediency as exhibited in the list of place names to which the first table is applied for experiment.

For convenience of reference the Russian letters are numbered serially in accordance with the sequence usually followed. It is observed that in the table of equivalents furnished by the Russian naval attaché the sequence is occasionally different.

The table furnished by the Russian naval attaché also carries only 34 characters, Nos. 35 and 36 being omitted. These omissions are evidently intentional, and probably reflect the practice obtaining in some departments of the Russian Government, No. 35 (f) being an exact duplication in sound of No. 22, and No. 36 being universally recognized as "seldom used," the sound being a superfluous one. Their abolition is advocated by reformers and would seem a wise act. Nevertheless, as they exist in all but most recent literature they must be incorporated here.

In the table used by the State Department also Nos. 35 and 36 are omitted, presumably in accordance with the same principle as the Russian embassy.

Nos. 17, 23, 30, 35, 36, are omitted from the table received from the War Trade Board; Nos. 28 and 30 are "mnte"; Nos. 35 and 36 probably follow the same principles as the State Department. The omission of No. 17 is not understood; it may be an inadvertence.

Identical equivalents are accepted by all the authorities consulted for the following Russian letters: Nos. 1, 2, 5, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22.

Following are considerations bearing upon each of the remaining Russian letters:

No. 3. There is, practically, unanimity in making it v, a few giving an additional parenthetical value f. Before or after a Russian hard consonant this letter is given the sound of f whether at the end or in the middle of a name; but as the present study is less concerned with the sound than with correct transcription, and as the English f would, in a case of retransliteration, be expressed by No. 22 it seems mandatory to transcribe No. 3 simply as v.

No. 4. All agree on g. Some add parenthetically an old rule of pronunciation involving occasional aspiration as if by an h; but that is now of rare usage and is of no interest in mere transcription.

No. 6. All agree on e. Some add parenthetically ye as indicating the sound when initial at the beginning of words or syllables; but that is merely a rule of pronunciation independent of the spelling, and, to authorize transcription into ye would introduce confusion with No. 31, which is the accepted equivalent of ye.

No. 7. The sound is that of the French j or of z in azure, and is variously transcribed as j, zh, sh, sch. Having regard for the phonetic values adopted by the Geographic Board, zh is the only combination of letters that seems to produce the required sound; it also has the weight of leading authorities.

No. 10 presents the difficulty of having much the same sound as No. 9, namely i (as in ravine), and is not distinguished from it in any table except that of the Library of Congress, which uses a diacritic mark. As used in place names it appears only before vowels, which suggests the greater propriety of transcribing it as with the consonant sound of y, producing it as yi. This will secure correct retransliteration. It is understood that it is being dropped by Russian reformers.

No. 11 is in much the same case as No. 10, and is similarly rendered as i in several tables and y in others. Authorities concur generally in assigning to it employment only after a vowel with which it forms a diphthong, having the sound of i short such as characterizes the second member of a diphthong, as in May, bay, etc. The Russian embassy transcribes it as iy, evidently in reproduction of a peculiar inflection. While, except to a Russian ear, the sound of iy may not be very distinctive, that diphthong commends itself as the best avenue of escape from the use of a diacritic.

No. 23, having the guttural sound of kh in khan, or ch in the Scotch loch, is represented by kh with virtual unanimity. The principal deviation is to ch, by authorities that give to c the hard sound, like k; and this is not admissible under the rule adopted by the Geographic Board.

No. 24 is variously rendered by ts, tz, and z. The weight of authority is for ts, which affords the purest representation of its sound.

No. 25 is almost unanimously rendered by ch; two deviations, tsch and tch, conform to special rules governing pronunciation in Germany and France but not recognized by the Geographic Board.
No. 26 is almost unanimously rendered by sh; two deviations, sch and ch, are subject to the same remarks as No. 25.

No. 27 is obviously a combination of Nos. 25 and 26, and the weight of authority is for shch, the sound being as in parish church. Two deviations, schtsch and chtch, respectively German and French, naturally follow the rules adopted in those countries for Nos. 25 and 26.

Nos. 28 and 30 are mute and often ignored in transliteration. The Library of Congress, however, does not sanction the omission, and in this seems clearly right for two reasons. First, if they are not represented in a transliteration, a retransliteration would be incomplete. Secondly, they have an actual function which is stated by the Russian embassy to be this—being generally placed at the end of a word (or syllable) No. 28 makes the sound hard and No. 30 makes the sound soft. The latter serves to palatalize the preceding consonant; following No. 15, which has the simple sound n, it forms with it gn or gne, which are to be pronounced as the French gn in mignon, or the Italian gn in ognl. It seems clear, therefore, that there should be characters assigned to them for transliteration; and the single and double apostrophes adopted by the Library of Congress seem suitable under every consideration. These must, of course, be made carefully distinct from quotation marks or inverted commas.

No. 29 is variously interpreted as i and y, with and without diaeresis; it is, however, a vowel (which eliminates y), having the sound of i in bill and pit, pronounced deep down in the throat and with closed teeth. An occasional sound is ui or we, concerning which Hugo’s Russian grammar says: “Most books give the sound as we or oo-e short, but this is hardly correct.” Bondar’s method, however, considers it regular. In imitative pronunciation it is not easily distinguished from No. 9 (i); but in written representation it must be distinguished from it in some way, and the choice seems to lie between the use of a diacritic and the frank adoption of some digraph which may be open to the objection of not correctly representing the most usual sound of the Russian character. Such a digraph is ui; and that seems to be the least objectionable solution.

Nos. 31, 33, and 34 form a group governed by a common principle in the representation of their sounds. The sounds are those that are produced, respectively, by ye, yu, and ya, or ie, iu, and ia. In certain racial areas they are expressed by je, ju, and ja, in accordance with the linguistic rules of those areas; but j has an entirely different value as used by the Geographic Board and is not at all applicable. Of the two forms, ye and ie, the former is in more perfect accord with the rule of the Geographic Board to employ y always as a consonant, as in it the stress is more naturally laid upon the constituents e and u and a, while in ie and iu and ia it could often be placed upon the first vowel, which only imparts the distinctive character to the constituents. Also a transcription ie, iu, and ia would require that the two vowels in each be joined by a diacritic mark, as in the Library of Congress card, to indicate that they are to be pronounced with one emission of the voice and are not intended to represent separate Russian characters. Ye, yu, and ya are therefore recommended for Nos. 31, 33, 34.

No. 32 is quite generally given as e, distinguished in the Library of Congress table by a diacritic mark, being otherwise identical with No. 6. The shades of pronunciation given to it vary between e as in enemy (like No. 6) and a as in fate. Whichever be the more exact, or the more frequent, the necessity exists of distinguishing it from No. 6 in transliteration; and, as the stock of digraphs is exhausted, there seems to be no escape from the alternative of making this one exception to the rule of avoiding the use of diacritics. The expedient may be considered of reducing the diacritic mark to an underscoring line, which is easily done by pen and is contained in ordinary typewriters and would be reproduced in print by italicizing the letter. This expedient, however, does not commend itself as conveying efficient distinction, and it seems that the necessity would better be admitted of using a diacritic mark.

No. 35 represents the Greek theta, but has the sound of $f$, identical with No. 22, which is the Greek phi and which is being substituted for it by Russian reformers. No. 35 is omitted from the tables used by the State Department, War Trade Board, and Russian Embassy, presumably because of its being wholly superfluous in an alphabet containing No. 22 ($f$). In the necessity, however, of providing a transcription of every Russian character, the choice appears to be open between $ph$ and $th$. Although the sound suggests the former ($ph$) as being the Latin form of the Greek letter conveying that sound, and the latter ($th$) is the Latin form of the Greek letter conveying a different sound, yet the latter seems preferable on the score of identity of origin and similarity of graphic presentation, the pronunciation being of secondary importance. If $ph$ were used the anomaly would be presented of using for the thirty-fifth letter a digraph which is the actual transliteration of the Greek letter adopted as the twenty-second Russian character. The initial letter of the Russian name Theodore is the thirty-fifth, but is pronounced $f$. It is therefore recommended that No. 35 be transcribed as $th$.

No. 36 is seldom used and has been discarded by many authorities. Recent grammars count the Russian alphabet as of only 35 characters, No. 36 being the one dropped; it is also ignored in the tables used by the State Department, War Trade Board, and Russian embassy. It represents the Greek upsilon, having a sound approaching $i$ and the German $oe$; as stated by the War Department, "it occurs mainly in certain ecclesiastical works and most of these are also found in good usage written with $i$." It must be differentiated in writing however, from No. 9; this has been done in the British Admiralty system by transcribing it as $o$, and this seems to be the best solution, it being a distinctive representation and not differing greatly in sound from that usually given to it.

The transliteration system resulting from the foregoing discussion is exhibited in the appended Table I.

In order to observe the actual application of the system in practice, Table II has been prepared containing a number of place names as spelled in Russian; the transliteration by Table I is given in column 2. Application of the results of further consideration is given in column 3 of the same table.

Scrutiny of Table II reveals that, while the development of the details is logical, the system in its entirety produces combinations of diphthongs so awkward as to be repugnant. Instances of this may be observed in several names containing the diphthongs $oiy$, $ely$, $aiy$, $uiy$, $yiify$, $uiify$. In some instances also doubt would exist as to which two of three letters form the digraph; for example, $iyu$ could represent the letters transliterated into $iy$ and $u$ or $i$ and $yu$.

Table I, therefore, must be amended; and it is manifest that, to accomplish satisfactory amendment, recourse must be had to the use of diacritics which, however, should be restricted to characters that can not be well distinguished in any other way.

Having under consideration Table I and the table used by the Library of Congress, which exhibits full recourse to diacritics, the following transliterations proposed in Table I are given further study:

No. 10. The use of $yi$ is objectionable as leading to awkward combinations with other diphthongs when in juxtaposition. It also represents a sound which is not forcibly or usually in evidence and which is, in general, better rendered by i. It is therefore recommended that No. 10 be transcribed as i with a diacritical mark, as in the Library of Congress table.

No. 11. The solution previously suggested is faulty in that, when in juxtaposition with u there would be ambiguity, as iyu could represent iy and u or i and yu. It is therefore recommended that a diacritical mark be used over i, as in the Library of Congress table.

No. 29. The proposed digraph ui is open to objection on the score of ambiguity, not being distinguishable from the two single vowels u and i. Further minor objections may be found in its expressing, according to some authorities, only an occasional and not the regular sound, and, when in juxtaposition with other diphthongs, forming a word of awkward appearance and inconvenient length. The simple y can not be substituted for it, however, as that is a consonant according to the Board's rule, and with it immediately preceding either of the vowels e or u or a, the combinations could be interpreted either as two single letters in each instance or as the diphthongs ye, yu, ya. This conflict with the method of the Library of Congress embraces Nos. 31, 33, and 34, the rendering of which is dependent upon the decision as to whether y is a vowel or a consonant; the latter use is so firmly intrenched in general practice as to seem mandatory, and this compels the avoidance of i in digraphs to represent Nos. 31, 33, and 34. It is therefore recommended that No. 29 be transcribed by i with a diacritical mark.

No. 36 is open to the objection of ambiguity, not being distinguishable from the two single vowels o and e; these rarely, if ever, occur in juxtaposition in Russian names, but there might be uncertainty in retransliteration. Recourse will, therefore, again have to be had to the use of a diacritic mark. Objection to this is minimized by the fact that the letter is virtually obsolete. It seems objectionable to use a fifth i, and preferable to use y distinguished by a diacritic, and thus explained as a vowel in the rare instances of its use. This will conform to the practice of the Library of Congress.

Table III, appended, exhibits the system resulting from the reconsideration. As a test of its expediency, it has been applied to the Russian place names of Table II, forming column 3 of that table, and appears to meet requirements.

There are some Russian names in such frequent popular use in this country and in England as to have become anglicized, probably beyond any attempt to change them to an academically correct transliteration. Among such names are Siberia, Archangel, Crimea, Thetis, differing from the renderings in Table II, column 3. This is a thing of frequent occurrence in other countries, e.g., Leghorn (Livorno), Naples (Napoli), Antwerp (Anvers), and others. Irrepressible popular exceptions, therefore, can not well be considered in antagonism to a general system.

In the matter of maps and charts the application of transliteration tables is affected by conditions not entering the domain of pure philology, as explained in the early part of this report, and seems to form virtually a separate problem. Rule E of the resolutions passed by the International Map Committee, assembled in London in 1909, suggests that the Governments of countries which do not use the Latin alphabet should publish an authorized system of map transliteration. The Hydrographic Office accepts the Chinese Maritime Customs romanization of names in China. Russia has not published an authorized system. In this situation it has not been considered important that the charts published by the Hydrographic Office be retransliterations, and it seems that a tacit consent to certain exemptions in chart work would be permissible pending action in Russia.

Viewing the matter from all angles, the subcommittee finally recommends the adoption of Table III. It is recognized that the use of diacritics is objectionable and wisely discountenanced by the Geographic Board; but no complete solution has been found without using them to distinguish five of the Russian characters, one of which is obsolete, and the necessity seems to exist of making an exception in this single and singular problem.

On the 6th of July, 1778, Meares, in the ship Nootka, arrived off the cape and found that a "prodigious easterly swell rolled on the shore," and he had soundings in 16 fathoms over a hard, sandy bottom. "After we had rounded the promontory, a large bay, as we had imagined, opened to our view, that bore a very promising appearance and into which we steered, with every encouraging expectation. As we steered into the bay the water shoaled to 3, 8, and 7 fathoms, where breakers were seen right ahead, and from the masthead they were observed to extend across the bay. We therefore hauled out." The name Cape Disappointment was given to the promontory.
It was called Cape Hancock by Gray in 1792. He changed this name to Cape Disappointment upon hearing that Meares had so named it. Cape Disappointment retained by Vancouver, by Belcher in 1839, and by Ex. Ex. in 1841. Duflout de Mofras, 1844, calls it Cape San Roque or Disappointment. The French colony which gained control of a part of the island was called Saint Domingue, and in 1795, when France acquired title to the entire island by treaty with Spain, it was called Saint Domingue; but when the French were driven out and independence declared, in 1804, the aboriginal name Haïti was revived by the negroes. Shortly after this the Spaniards reestablished themselves in the eastern part of the island, retaining the French name modified to Santo Domingo, but in 1821 lost control, and from 1822 to 1843 the whole island was under one government as the Republic of Haïti. In 1844 the eastern portion of the island again asserted its independence of Haïti and established the Dominican Republic, which remains to the present day. Thus to-day the island of Haïti, which seems to be the proper name, consists of two countries, Haïti on the west end and Dominican Republic on the east end.—R. C.
